

When The Morning Comes

Hell or Highwater

5 am

We slowly lose the moon as it begins again
Clocking in
I'd give anything to do more than just survive in this
Breathe it in
The cold, crisp morning air has now become your friend
Tell me this
Have you ever felt like dying from the lack of it?

On and on with the rising sun

I've been living too long this way
Every night its another mistake
But I'll be fine when the morning comes
And I'm standing at a cross road every day
But I'm always a little to late
But I'll be fine when the morning comes

5 p.m.

The faces of my family bring me back again
Hold it in
The truth inside keeps crushing like a heart attack
Let them know
That life keeps getting better as the days go on
Over load
Like a ticking time bomb waiting for the world to blow

On and on with the setting sun

I've been living too long this way
Every night its another mistake
But I'll be fine when the morning comes
And I'm standing at a cross road every day
But I'm always a little to late
But I'll be fine when the morning comes

When the morning comes
I run away one last time
Forget yesterday
Today is mine
