Space

I see it inside your eyes, feel it in your soul. A part of you is moving on, the other half is gone. I don't know what you want from me, no, you lock it all inside. I try to give you everything, but there's nothing else that I can hide. We've been trying so long. You've been pushing too hard. You should say what's wrong and echo what's right. You need a little space and I need mine. When you and I all alone, it feels so damn crowded. The house we share is not a home when you're inside it. So, now, I go and pack my things, girl, I must be moving on. I couldn't stand to face you, so I, I guess that's why I wrote this song. You've been trying so long. We've been pushing too hard. You should say what's wrong and echo what's right. You need a little space and I need mine. Oh, oh, oh, we've been trying so long. You've been pushing too hard. You should say what's wrong and echo what's right. You need a little space and I need mine. You need a little space and I need mine.