

Slow Dance

Inara George

Do you know who you are?
I've had so many lives
It gets confusing

And when you come to my door
It's hard to not consider how things could've been

It isn't wrong, it isn't right
It isn't dark, it isn't light
We just wake it up and watch it fly

Last night I slow danced with younger men
Do you remember who I was?
I was that girl again

Last night, I tried pretending
And today I am remembering how the end is the beginning

Will you stay up late?
And tell me how you tried to understand
Just too many mistakes

If there's anyone who could forgive I'd call out your name

It isn't wrong, it isn't right
It isn't dark, it isn't light
We just wake it up and watch it fly

Last night I slow danced with younger men
Do you remember who I was?
I was that fool again

Last night, I tried pretending
And today I am remembering how the end is the beginning

These days I get you all alone
We'll shuffle through those memories
And though they say youth is wasted on the young
We never could've blasted through those nights
Through streets and stars
Knowing what we know now

Last night I slow danced with younger men
Do you remember who I was?
I was that girl again

Last night, I tried pretending
And today I am remembering how the end is the beginning

How the end is the beginning
