Swallowing an ocean of absence Soaking in the tortured admiss.

Soaking in the tortured admissions and passionate denials
The absent friends and enemies, the manufactured threats
The crushing weight of memories are all that I have left
The absence of feeling - no love, no pity, no hate
And the absence of anything as what's left of me
Drowns in waves of mindless apathy, submerged in total despair

Drowns in waves of mindless apathy, submerged in total despair Dilute the venom of misery

See the world through the bottom of a glass

As all sensation separates from a numbing heart

Another dosage of the antidote suffocates emotion before it starts the same depression

The same fear...constant frustration at the same reflected star es

...but cold flesh protects my mind like a clear, smooth, hard b ottle-glass skull

From crushing volumes of nothing