

Queen Size Bed

Jake Coco

How can you not believe in evolution, and everything that came before man and woman How can you not believe in common sense? Guns and bombs and chicken wires wont ever make amends the only thing I lied about, was everything I ever said we used to pass time, laying around and making love in your queen size bed

you're making me tired of weeping staying up all night, when I should have been sleeping, in your queen size bed

how can you not believe in devolution? taxi cab confessions of modern blueprints how can you not believe in love at first sight? how can you trust anything less, stay with me tonight and forever do you wanna get high? never come down....torn and tattered, chase the stars you're the only one I want you're the only one I need

you're making me tired of weeping staying up all night when I should have been sleeping in your queen
size bed

this is not love but I will settle for so much less I want to touch you baby, I don't care about respect

I'm in your queen size bed god and all of his architects are laughing at my expense have mercy on the criminal he's just trying to get ahead all I got is my single and my blood is stained red I don't mind being alone as long as no one else is lying in your queen size bed