

Stolen

Jason Gray

Nobody wishes for this
Nobody is looking for heart-ache
But I know sometimes that's just how it goes
I wasn't asking for easy, I didn't want the hard way either
But I guess that's what You thought I needed most

If my life never would have got broken
Then my hands would have never been open
And my heart never would have been stolen
But Your love came to me at my lowest
And I've been singing ever since that moment
Hallelujah, my heart has been stolen

In the middle of it
I couldn't see a reason
So I guess I question what I was worth
But You saw my heart as a jewel
And You broke in like a thief and showed me
That You do anything to make me Yours

If my life never would have got broken
Then my hands would have never been open
And my heart never would have been stolen
But Your love came to me at my lowest
And I have been singing ever since that moment
Hallelujah, my heart has been stolen

Sometimes You let us get broken down
Busted and bruised from the inside out
So You can build us up again

Yeah, sometimes You let us get broken down
Lost in the dark right before we're found
So You can take us home again

If my life never would have got broken
Then my hands would have never been open
And my heart never would have been stolen
But Your love came to me at my lowest
And I have been singing ever since that moment
Hallelujah, my heart has been stolen

Sometimes You let us get broken down
Busted and bruised from the inside out
So You can build us up again

Yeah, sometimes You let us get broken down
So You can take us home again

Hallelujah, my heart has been stolen
Hallelujah, my heart has been stolen
