

Blue Skies Again

John Anderson

You'd think it's raining for all the teardrops
That have watered down this beer
They keep falling like a storm that just won't end
Since you've gone, hon, no they ain't stopped
Just keep falling down 'round here
I wonder if I'll ever see blue skies again

Now in the distance that old mister sun seems to always shine
While overhead it's gray instead around this heart of mine
And those old dark clouds ain't passin' through, no they're set tlin' in
I wonder if I'll ever see blue skies again

Now I've been as strong as a man can be
But it's a losin' fight
'Cause that memory of yours is bound to end
Just like those old dark clouds it follows me
Won't let me out of it's sight
I wonder if I'll ever see blues skies again

Now in the distance that old mister sun seems to always shine
While overhead it's gray instead around this heart of mine
And those old dark clouds ain't passin' through, no they're set
tlin' in
I wonder if I'll ever see blue skies again
I wonder if I'll ever see blue skies again
