

You Already Know My Love

John Anderson

You look for love every chance you get,
You look so far that you can't see near,
If love walked by, would you even notice it?

Cause here I am jumping up and down,
Waving my hand for a second glance,
And if you know all about passionate kisses,
And long walks in the dull day sunset,
If you've ever been held up so high on a pedestal,
That there's no more line between what's real,
And what your dreams are made of.

Then you already know my love,
You've already filled my soul,
You know what I'm thinking of,
Cause you already know my love.

Sunny days seem to come and go,
C'est la vie hey you never know,
Just let her roll, let it flow,
Just live and let go.

But love's been known to be a game of chance,
But like to think of this as more than that,
And if you know all about passionate kisses,
And long walks in the dull day sunset,
If you've ever been held up so high on a pedestal,
That there's no more line between what's real
And what your dreams are made of.

Then you already know my love,
You've already filled my soul,
You know what I'm thinking of,
Cause you already know my love.

I can't say there's a hundred percent chance
That this will turn into a storybook romance,
Hell we might not even make it through the first dance
But I bet the odds are pretty damn good,
That if you dreamed of what it's like to be loved right
And held tight, then I'm telling you, you already know my love.

Yeah you already know my love,
You've already filled my soul,
You know what I'm thinking of,
Cause you already know my love.
Yeah you already know my love.
