

Fall

John Elefante

Moving through time on a carousel dream
Beneath me the ground won't stop spinning
All is fair in my pursuit of the brass ring
I'm running a race no one's winning

And I search through the forest for a diamond in the rough
And I stumble on a pot of gold, but it's never enough
And I cover my eyes and pretend I don't see
I should be looking for You instead of looking for me

When I fall in You, when I fall in You
I'm covered by love and submerged in Your truth
When I fall in You

Tearing down mountains, repainting the sky
Pretending to be my own hero
I strive for independence, on me I rely
Pride is a wound that can't heal

Take my soul on a journey, try to find rainbow's end
I throw caution to the wind, I get knocked down again
But I'll hold on for what I know I must do
Cause I don't need what I want
What I need is what's true

When I fall in You, when I fall in You
It becomes clear to me who you want me to be
When I fall in You
