

When Will You Realize

John Wetton

This is the year that we all live in fear
There's no future for you and I
It may be your dream but you don't fit in my scheme
And I'll run from your loving arms, it will be, that You've not seen the bad side of me
I will stay in your sweet memory, 'till you die...

This is the day you should wake up and say
You'll discover what's going down because,
Maybe you're thinking that love's everlasting,
But no, there's something wrong, when you're sure
That the odds are all stacked on your side
But I'm only along for the ride, you'll observe...

This is the hour as it starts to turn sour and
You find out, that love's a sad game and
This is the moment you're losing, confusing,
That same old sympathy, but you carry on
And you dance 'till the guests have all gone,
There'll be no-one to carry you home,
You're alone, all alone... and

When will you realize?
