

Touch Of Faith

Joy Williams

Most live a lifetime and never see
The soul of tomorrow in someone's eyes
Some give up on all of their dreams
One second before they materialize
But love broke through walls of stone
It was You, it was You alone

You crack the sky like broken glass
You rescued me when my chance had passed
Sometimes things aren't as hard as you may think
Because all you need is just a touch of faith

Some never ever turn a key to the door of their heart's desires
Too afraid to fall somewhere in between
Tomorrow's fears and the pressure's fire
Your love broke through walls of stone
It was You, it was You alone

Your touch pushed back the clouds just like the sun
Your hand pulled me out of the hardest time
That I've ever known, that I ever knew
Oh Lord, that was all because I met You
Your love broke through walls of stone
It was You, it was You alone
