

Weight Of The World

Jughead's Revenge

Every once in a while
I'll turn around and think I see you standing there
Every once in a while
I'll look in the mirror and swear i see you match my stare
I would look for you up and down
I thought you'd always be around
In your heart you carried
The weight of the world
That would always be your part
I'll never forget your smile
The one that we share
The one that i won't let them see because you're not there
When you died, I looked inside
I can't rely on much anymore
Still there's still so much to do won't forget the things you said
I can't believe in much anymore
But I will always believe in you