

She's My Rushmore, Max

Junior Doctor

He's glancing at her from across the room that's barely lit enough

For anyone attending the event who notice that he was

For if he made it know that he wished that he'd never left her

Then buried feelings of regret would surely soon emerge

So he'll take the pain

And push it away

Cause he knows he'll never forget

He let her go

And lost his only chance to know

What they could be

So many months have come and passed he tries his very best to keep

Away the maybes and what ifs that plague his mind when not asleep

And for this reason dreams he frequents to his best ability

Cause dreams prove to present are far more appealing reality

So he'll take the pain

And push it away

Cause he knows he'll never forget

He let her go

And lost his only chance to know

What they could be

For the rest of his life

He'll live with this

Knowing that he gave up all he really wanted

So he'll take the pain

And push it away

He let her go

And lost his only chance to know

What they could be

And for the rest of his life

He'll live with this

Knowing that he gave up all he really wanted

And Denver miles are what separate them

This blame trail leads to his doorstep

And though he's tried

He knows he won't forget
