

Cup Of Tea

Kathy Mar

And honey I feed you when you're hungry
Love you when you're mean
Stand by every up and down
And every old in-between
And baby I've been there through all your changes
And there's something you should face
Though I may not be your cup of tea
I could never be replaced

You've been a friend when it was easy
And even sometimes when it was not
And there are sometimes when the things you say
Just seem to hit the spot
But then there are some times when you disappear
You've really got the knack
And still I know that when you need a friend
You'll "disappear" right back

I know I can't expect your presence
And I can't demand your time
And I can be sure that I will see you less
When everything's going fine
But you know that I'm the one who'll hold you
Through all your pain and fear
Though I'm not your world not your kind of girl
I'm still the one who's here

And babe when the world has left you broken
And love has left you dry
You know I can help you get back on your feet
And give it another try
And someday when you run out of mountain
If you should ever start to fall
I may be the last one that you think on
But make me the first one that you call

And honey I'll feed you when you're hungry
Love you when you're mean
Stand by every up and down
And every old in-between
And baby I'll be there through all your changes
Running' cold or burnin' hot
I may not be your cup of tea
But I'm the one you've got
