

Breathe Honestly

Kina Grannis

I'm moving gently tender steps
I'm pulling weight upon my back
And I can see it's not much longer 'til
This weight becomes a burden making me stand still

And I can see another light on
Moving faster through this room
And I am waiting for your company
You say I'm not alone, well better let me see

You are what I dream
I'm breathing you, you're breathing me
It's better now that I can see
You breathing honesty

A conversation had
A void of silence grew
An overbearing aching in my heart led me to Speak out my words, I trembled wishing that I knew

And it was worth the silence worth the tears
That brought me here now to face these fears
Now I'm stronger, so are you
Here at this place we've gotten to

You are what I dream
It's better now that I can see
You breathe honesty