

See, the cement has never meant so much
My hot head cools to the stone cold touch
I look to settle my seat with the dust
Brain, leave me be
Can't you see that these eyes are shut?

And my bed through that window
I hit zero
This guiltless love, let sins flow
Fool me, you fool me
I descend smoothly
My concrete bed beckons
And can you hear me?
I was born in seconds
And do you fear thee?
Will you steer me towards the ground?
No, no, no I was never scared
Pain, it made my vision impaired
But now I'm free of care
See, life isn't fair
And at least death's there
To hold both hands
And stroll through lands
And as it stands
The empty vessel of a man
Can't be moved
It's not the cracks or the grooves
But the pavement soothes
The pavement is soothing
My body isn't moving
My brain is buried deep beneath the ground
These fears, were drowned
The pavement is soothing
My body isn't moving
My brain is buried deep beneath the ground
These fears, they drown

See the cement has never meant so much
My hot head cools to stone cold touch
I look to settle my seat with the dust
Brain, leave me be
Can't you see that these eyes are shut?
