

The Beginning

Lifehouse

tainted, has our love grown cold in a place that's bitter and broken we tasted of a world unknown surely there must be something better something forever

hello from the world below I'm watching the sun burning as the world is slowly turning I know that in letting go I'm learning how to live through a life I have to give walking past the city lights silence can be so disturbing you'll find me standing in the night the stars never seemed so unending so unending

hello from the world below
im watching the sun burning as the world is slowly turning I know that in letting go im learning how to live through a life I have to give

we painted white-wash everything when all that remains are shadows of the stains tell me where did we go wrong can we just move on

hello from the world below
im watching the sun burning
as the world is slowly turning I know that in letting go im learning how to live through a life I have to give hello to the world below watching the world spinning this night seems so unending I follow to a place I know that's only the beginning start over after ending