

Longest Road To Rome

Malrun

In the years to come We walk alone We walk alone Now the fighting's done Starting to atone For all the sins we've known

Fading smiles once wide Dead and gone Washed away in silence Memories once so bright Burned and scorned Soiled beyond resemblance

In the years to come, you walk alone, you walk alone Longest road to Rome Sticks and stones may break your bones

Tear my eyes out, rip away Tear my heart out, serve the plate

Can't trust the eyes It's the disguise

Stitched a hundred times The wounds won't heal Bleeding like a fountain The sheets turn red at night Covert dreams Buried in a mountain

In the years to come, you walk alone, you walk alone Longest road to Rome Sticks and stones may break your bones

Keep on walking, not too late Stumbling onwards, build a fate