Only the Moment

Marc Almond

The clock on the wall Has just told you Your hour has come And you know those that God loves Die young But remember There is never forever Only the moment There is never forever Only the moment You're thinking too much about Who will think badly of you You throw away chances Let love pass you by But remember There is never forever Only the moment There is never forever Only the moment Don't be afraid Of the dark of the night Just reach for your feelings Let your mood tell you You're making the right move The days fade away And before you can say I wish I'd made all the right moves It's too late With guilt on your shoulder And fear in your heart You're bedevilled by angels Belittled by fools But remember There is never forever Only the moment There is never forever Only the moment
