

Love, Long Distance

Mary Hopkin

Love, long distance
Has to be so much stronger
For hearts they grow heavy and
Hearts they will leave

Love, long distance
Suffers a pain much deeper
Reaching to the soul
With every word, thought and deed

Love, long distance
Has to be all-forgiving
When each unspoken promise
Hangs on every word we say

Love, long distance
So many the miles between us
Yet somehow when dreaming
You're just a breath away

By and by
Morning light will find us
Clinging to the dream
We dare not let it fade away

Love, long distance
Making the heart grow fonder
With every beat I wonder
Is it all too hard to bear?

Time will tell
If this love was meant to be
And I will count the moments
Until you're here with me
Until you're here with me
You're here with me
