

Something Right

Microwave

Last night, I crashed into your car
And it knocked the breath right out of me
But I forgot about my breathing when you stepped out into the street
You called me a dick, but you could have called me anything
'Cause I saw that little smile you tried to hide behind your cheeks

And even though my insurance is now too high to pay
I got your number and I'm calling you on Friday
Can't help but think that after all the things that I've done wrong
Maybe I did something right

Last night, you told me that you're leaving
After you broke my favorite lamp
You said you hate all of my friends and you hate me too
You think I'm cheap, and you're probably right, I'm kind of cheap
But I just can't afford expensive girls like you

And even though you think the last few months were such a waste of time
I look at old pictures and remember you were once mine
Can't help but think that after all the things that I've done wrong
Maybe I did something right

Last night, you told me that you're pregnant
My throat collapsed, I couldn't breathe
You said there's a little man inside you that looks a little bit like me
I should've gone to college and got some type of degree
'Cause now I got a second job and I work like 60 hours a week

And even though all we ever do is fight
I could feel a kicking in your stomach last night
Can't help but think that after all the things that I've done wrong
Maybe I did something right