Standing alone when the darkness fills my home And the rains washed all hope from my soul again

They run in the heat of the sun, coming out of the blue I see them walking and longing for a story of truth The army of fire, a searching desire
They'd better should follow golden rules

There's a mirror on the wall reflecting every light There are writings on the floor, the shadows from behind?

When the ocean burns, a fire flows, an era is coming to an end When the wind's will grows, the earth is blown, the scars will heal

but never mend
When the signs appear

They fall in the dust of the heat, redemption they need Can't take the suffer from leaving all memories behind The unwritten law and idols have fallen They better should use the helping hands

See the mirror on the wall reflecting secret signs See the writings on the floor, a shadow from behind?

There's a mirror on the wall reflecting every light There are writings on the floor, the shadows from behind?

See the writings on the wall a shadow from behind? See the mirror on the floor, like a cross in a morning light