The earth moves and the sun keeps still Bathwater tides come in A bird hits the window pane With a joyless sound That echoes round and round

In your belly swim the spores We picked off the forest floors And if you must cry with grief Blow your nose right on my sleeve

Dreams push out reality
Sand kisses fingertips
Ghosts sing behind your ear
For the one you loved, who's never coming back

In the bathtub swim the spores We picked off the forest floors And if you must cry with grief Blow your nose right on my sleeve

Blow your nose right on my sleeve Blow your nose right on my sleeve Blow your nose right on my sleeve Blow your nose right on my sleeve
