

Glass Accident

Neil Young

Woke up this morning to a glass accident
Glass fell in love with the floor
Too many pieces there for me to clean up
So I left a warning message by the door

Danger on a scary skull and crossbones
A piece of paper on the floor
Covered broken pieces of a love dream lingering there
That could do some damage for ever more

Just imagine what could go wrong
And how some life's could change forever
If you're not careful how you handle delicate things
But now is better than never

There was a lingering hope that made it through the dark night
And threatened everything there after
Hope that was confusing, looking like a bight light
Blinding you forever with its power

Woke up this morning to a glass accident
Glass fell in love with the floor
Too many pieces there for me to clean up
So I left a warning message by the door
