

Over the Head, Below the Knees

New Found Glory

You must not have a heart
Have nothing in your chest
To let it go for so long
And let this go so far
That it goes over your head

You could fool anyone
With your pensive smile
And you could live in your lie
For only a while
And I could only take so much (from not so far away)
And I admit this could be love (but love can always wait)
But it goes over your head

What does she have
Can you let go
Can you tell me
What I am aching to know

You could ruin any mood
Just by saying what's on your mind
You could only tame his body
Never tame this mind
And I can only take so much (from now so far away)
And I admit this could be love (but love can always wait)
But it goes over your head

What does she have
Can you let go
Can you tell me
What I am aching to know

If I'm reaching in
You're not letting it show
Used up your space now
And there's no room to grow
Too deep, can't breath
And you can't find the end
It's right in front of you
But it goes over your head

What does she have
Can you let go
Can you tell me
What I am aching to know

You must not have a heart
Have nothing in your chest