You've got the beauty, but that don't mean a thing A bland reciprocation, but it don't bother me You're happier with lights on underneath a darkened sky Only in the spotlight can you tell me of your crimes I understand your situation, but I can't Seem to understand the motivations you once had I recall a message I once left behind a screen I was entranced when you were never, never there for me You're draining, you're draining me, I'm not a tub What ever happened to the girl I used to hold? I held in such a high regard Where is the girl who had it all? I used to think I wasn't worthy of your cause I used to feel so lucky Until the day I felt a weakness in my arms I knew from where it had been coming You're bleeding, you're bleeding me, I can recall The passions you once had, where did they go? I knew a girl who had it all? I knew a girl where did she go?
