

Act III Carnal Delight In The Vortex Of Evil

Opera IX

The way leading to him is unknown and steep
And the bodies rests of those who didn't deserve him make it slippery But it is at the borders of my soul, so I know the secrets to walk along it staying unhurt

The threshold of his abode is barred by a tangle of infected thorns But my soul keeps its key

His throne is shielded by 12 servants' stare
But he has called me, I felt him calling me
And he has given me the power to bewitch them

His rooms are icy But he warms my naked body with his breath

The throb and the blood flow suspend
In the presence of him

His eyes, diabolical larvas his pupils, scan me
His glance captures me and penetrates my breast

Goblet of delicious vermilion wine
I give myself up to his grim embrace

Throb of death

He is the storm
He is the breeze
He is the aurora
He is the twilight
He is the everlasting mind in the timeless abyss
He injures and sates my lips
He lessens my hunger
He appeases my thirst
He is fire burning my flesh
He is icy snow settling in my womb

Rod of viscid serpents Death and blood excite him And my blood is the balm for his ecstasy and his voracious delight

Putrid carrion with burnt seales Obscure seducer with smooth scented skin of infant

Now I know you
But he has always known me