

Song of liberty

Orange Blue

I'd defeat any wall to be alone with your brilliant charme anyw here and hold me there in your healing arms. Even the wind blow s trying to expand the depth of the snow in our hearts see that boiled white at aglance.

'Cause I have tasted
your delight
your one fate your respect of golden gates your big smile after my voice that told your thoughts about a choice your immense unique fight your sweet essence in your light your sweet song of liberty whose brawny waves roll over me.

And I won't stop my hand scratching princess' name in that gold en sand though the salt comes back again dissolved.

I'll never believe who we are and I'll never agree with that se ntiments surrounding us.
