

All the King's Horses

Plankeye

On a great white horse the king will come riding, He's the only one called, "Faithful and true,"
With his eyes afire and blood dipped clothing; he had a name that no one else knew,
And by his side are the armies of Heaven, dressed in linen clean, white as the snow,
Riding down to Earth with vengeance so holy, for a battle to trample their foe.

All the king's horses and all the king's men gonna ride down from Heaven, where they've been,
All the king's horses and all the king's men gonna put this world back together again.

When dust and smoke all disappear, the king will reign for a thousand years,
And when the lion lays down with the lamb, there'll be peace in the land of Abraham,
They will beat their swords into ploughs when every tongue declares, and every knee bows.

All the king's horses and all the king's men gonna ride down from Heaven, where they've been,
back together again.

All the king's horses and all the king's men gonna ride down from Heaven, where they've been,
All the king's horses and all the king's men gonna put this world
back together again,
All the king's horses and all the king's men gonna ride down from Heaven, where they've been,
All the king's horses and all the king's men gonna put this world
back together again.
