Blue Heaven

The Pogues

Alligators snap at your ankles
And branches snap at your brain
If I ever get through this swamp alive
I'll nevermore pray for rain

This must be the place And still it somehow don't seem right Something in the moon could change These endless days to lonely nights

I take a stroll down by the sea And walk along the pier Then I slip and hit my head Now's the time to fear

I see the surface, see the rocks See my past fly swiftly by I feel the water in my lungs And wake up screaming for my life

In my blue heaven
There's a bottle of Pontchartrain
Chalmette by moonlight
To take away the pain

Card sharks and blue harps
And dolphins who leap
In my blue heaven
Where I can laugh and I can weep

Black shapes zip into corners The big lads start to crawl To holes of their own making In the cracks within the wall

Snakes and rats and spiders
I know that they're still there
I pray to God that I may sleep
Without a hope, without a care

In my blue heaven
There's a bottle of Pontchartrain
Chalmette by moonlight
To take away the pain

Felines and sea lions
And rain on the beach
In my blue heaven
With angels who aren't out of reach

In my blue heaven
There's a bottle of Pontchartrain
Chalmette by moonlight
To take away the pain

Nightingales sing
And the bells they will ring

In my blue heaven
The bells of Hell
Go ding a ling a ling
