Sleeping masters roused to burning homes from beds. Steeping to ddlers plucked from their watery deaths: ribbons, plaques and s oft-soap are the ephemeral rewards paid to the slaves whose sel fless acts accord a higher value to their masters, while partin g gifts (bolt pistols) console the rest. The remainder. Too bad the tributes paid to lives that relegate these thrones to live s spent valuing the runners-up, are known to be neither fleetin g nor desirable. But nothing surprises me these days. I just si t and watch the box-cars roll by and wait. Patient. Unattended. A package under a terminal bench. A short fuse to scatter stea dy hands if I forget to remember that better lives have been lived in the margins, locked in the prisons and lost on the gallows than have ever been enshrined in palaces.
