Separations

As the sun shines down an the land, so her heart is crying for love And there is no-one there, no-one to hear her voice And she will sleep alone Again tonight Now the moon is high in the sky, in her room she calls out his name But he is somewhere else, somewhere she cannot see And the night is dark between them now My God, my God, why did he go away ? Now the sun shines on in a new town, with a smile he gets off t he train He lights a cigarette, leans back to see the sky Oh and he thinks how much better off he is Without her hanging around, let's do it And the day is passing by him and he has nowhere to stay At a lonely bar-room table his mind goes back to yesterday To the girl who's dead and burried, but her face lives in his e yes He must forget that face forever, make the future start tonight , forget her But the meal he eats is dead flesh, there is cancer in his ciga rettes And the drinks won't do a thing for him, but revive some stupid memories Then a hairstyle that reminds him, makes him run into the night Where the moon hangs high above him - the same moon that she's praying on tonight But the wind catches her words and the moon swallows them whole Now the moon is high in the sky, in her room she calls out his name That night is cold and dark and she is all alone The bed is empty now, her body screams for love She wants to be with him, oh but he's so far away Oh and the night is dark between them now My God, my God, why did he go away ?

Pulp