Time For Change

Quench

Mundane predictability
Dawns on me like the sunrise
There's no unknown within the place
Where I exist

Mechanic like occurrence Of each days routine With prosaic efficiency That steals the dream

If you always do what you've always done And you always sing what you've always sung Then you'll always get what you always had If you always go where you've always been You'll always see what you've always seen And you'll always be who you always are

It's time for change, can't live like this no more It's time for change, can't live like this no more

The insecurity of difference It threatens my very core It wraps and binds me up To the comfort point
