

Effects of the Terrestrial Syndrome

Rise to Fall

When I was roaming across the universe everything was silent, a real peace of mind a swell of clarity made me see everything clearly but since I'm back all my senses are disturbed

I lift my eyes up to the endless sky, I see nothing but a great maze in disguise

I learned to read the stars, then I forgot so teach me once aga in
I see them spell out in golden letters your name

Up there I was no one, I had no defined form
I was just a cosmic ball connected to the source Now my new body is a prison for the soul Limited, disorientated, I can't perceive, I'm stuck

I learned to read the stars, then I forgot so teach me once aga
in
I see them spell out in golden letters your name

The pulse of the planet is going faster, everything's accelerat ed, a growing disaster

I lift my eyes up to the endless sky

I learned to read the stars, then I forgot so teach me once aga
in
I see them spell out in golden letters your name