

Flight In Formation

Rome

come here
lower your eyes and surrender to the blossoms spring has brought to adorn our grief
with the memory of you love stole away to another body to another thief to a world you are withering you are starving, draining its blood
come here
we know nothing of hatreds nor their jealousies nor their enmities

we laugh and dance in perfect composure this is our beauty of simplicity and severity of discipline be free of whatever they teach of whatever they preach free yourself of their entrapment's of their weapons of mass distraction free yourself from the bondage of time and place and status for what peace do they give?
what truth do they reveal? what lie do they live?
whose blood weeps from these wounds?
detach yourself!
detach yourself!

for there is a war
deep in our hearts and that's where all battles ought to be fought
come here
lower your eyes and surrender