

Crystal Fallin' Rain

Ronnie Milsap

When everyone you love hurts you in return
And when every road you take is just another lesson learned
And when the shadows catch you crying looking back at yesterday
Just listen to the magic sound of the crystal falling rain.

As the rain comes down and you look out through the blinds
You know somewhere I'll be watching too from another place and time
And if you have a need for loving just press your lips against the pane
And know somewhere I'll be kissing you through the crystal falling rain.

For all the love we once had now it's painful to believe
That we're one more card at Christmas and one less set of keys
But if you ever count your memories and a tear falls on my cheek
Just listen to the magic sound of the crystal falling rain.

As the rain comes down and you look out through the blinds
You know somewhere I'll be watching too from another place and time
And if you have a need for loving just press your lips against the pane
And know somewhere I'll be kissing you through the crystal falling rain
