

There's A Place

Roo Panes

Another life, another time
Could there be a place for you and I?
Abandon reason, adopt the rhyme
And there could be a place for us to find
There could be a place

I flew home like a springtide swallow
I left the Cape of Good Hope behind
Towards your eyes, so full of paradise
I missed the flight 'cause you were on my mind
Can't get you off my mind

You had to know, oh yeah, you had to know
That you're worth more than you'd ever noticed
That there's less glory in a risin' sun
Than in the day that your life began

But what can we do? Where can we go from here?
Always so far, always so near
Who cast the spell of our fair-weather hell
The sweet hellos, the fair farewells?

Well, no one knows where the wind may blow
I've never been a man for another's shadows
But sometimes I drive by the place you live
Just hoping I might catch you in the windows
Well, if you've known love, then maybe you've known pain
It's "here comes the sun", and then the bloody rain
And, though there's nothing, nothing to forgive
If we could find the grace, there could be a place
There could be a place

Another life, another time
Could there be a place for you and I?
Abandon reason, adopt the rhyme
And there could be a place for us to find
There could be a place
