

The days go by too quickly
The sun sets too soon

I'm staying here forever, will you join me?
I'll look around this darkness for something I can call beautiful Anything at all a butterfly on broken wings wont last too long

Like a world without love

Days turn into years
And all the smiles that we used to have now turn into tears
I think with everything thats happened now everything is weird
I'll be here
But I'll never be alone

Dusk and dawn are all the same
And I'm staring to doubt
That anything will ever change at all
And as autumn turns to winter
And summer fades to fall
The world could change from red to black and white
In no time at all
It might take me to the end
But I can't figure out
Why I'm really here
What the hell this is about

Days turn into years
and all the smiles that we used to have now turn into tears
I think with everything thats happened now everything is weird
I'll be here
But I'll never be alone