For Celebrations Past

Screaming Trees

This is for footsteps approaching the night They keep themselves moving and do what is right Now watch what you gather and hold in your hand Numbers are many who misunderstand

Drink your wine away instead I won't remember all that's said Say farewell and close the door You'll find me never more

That I believe in
That I believe in
That I believe in you
Must be a crying shame

Tell you a story of that which comes last All of the sorrow that lives in the past Now if you're tired of all that's been told Don't be surprised that I've grown so old

Drink your wine away instead I won't remember all that's said Say farewell and close the door You'll find me never more

And I believe in
That I believe in
That I believe in you
Must be a crying shame

Breathing in shadows or dead on the vine I'm there in the morning to take you sometimes To watch what you gather and hold in your hand The numbers are many who misunderstand

Drink your wine away instead I won't remember all that's said Say farewell and close the door You'll find me never more

And I believe in
That I believe in
That I believe in
That I believe in
That I believe in you
Must be a crying shame
