Cry

(Cry, baby) I heard a cry at night, I heard him slam the door There was a screech of tyres, but he'll be back for sure Now through my apartment wall, I can hear her sweet tears start in' to fall

So cry, baby, wash out your heart Hang your life out to dry and make a new start Then came a telephone ring, it was a logical thing I left it for a while, I let her hang up and redial Then I picked up the telephone, 'n I said "Don't worry, honey No no no, no no no, you're not alone"

It was a tale unwound, I'd heard it all before And nothin' I could say would ever ease her pain Still I picked up the telephone, 'n I said "Don't worry, honey No no no, no no no, no no no, no no no, you're not alone"
