

Very Unlikely

Shelley Fabares

Raindrops, raindrops fallin' up,
A rich man livin' in a shed,
A big bald eagle with plenty of hair,
And a hat tryin' on a head.

Very unlikely, isn't it;
Most improbable too.
And it's just as unlikely that I'll ever fall
For anyone else but you.

Morning glories growning down,
A French cook cookin' from a can,
And four square wheels on an automobile,
And a pair of pants tryin' on a man.

We may break up in a hundred years
There's always that possibility.
But before that happens to you and me
I guarantee that we will see.
(What'll we see?)

Raindrops, raindrops fallin' up.
(very unlikely!)

Morning glories growning down.
(couldn't be!)

And it's just as unlikely that I'll ever fall
For anyone else but you.

Chestnuts, chestnuts, roasting cold.
(very unlikely!)

Ice cream sodas freezing cold.
(couldn't be!)

And it's just as unlikely that I'll ever fall
For anyone else but you.

Raindrops, raindrops fallin' up.
Raindrops, raindrops fallin' up.
