I live in a castle
I am a prince
On days I try
To please my queen

Soon as I start to smile My smiling queen Who sits across the table By the food she made

Like a bat I flushed the girl
And I flew out my back door
And I came to no one no more
She ran without glances
And railed like a red coal train

Eyelids are open
When the sun is high
I slip away from my queen's
Grey state

I can be settled down and be doing just fine Until I heard that old train Rolling down the line

With the light she disappeared And set me in a whirl And i hope that beautiful girl

I set a fire burning
And I railed on through the night
I set a fire burning
And I railed on through the night

She peeked around the corner She offered me her hand My teeth touched her skin Then she was gone again

Now my queen is fine
In her early grave
After that girl I'll keep her warm
There's nothing more to save
