Well, it's just another song Talkin' about how you let them take your rights Another redundant verse about how you refused to fight & lost What cost? Your cause has got no champion How could you hope to win? By just complaining Now it's raining on you parade Decisions made could cost you dearly Not just your money but your freedom Are you wealthy improper choices could be deadly They took your so-called rights You didn't even fight Well, here's your motherfuckin' wake up call & there just ain't no way around it Caught you asleep once again & we ain't havin' it Got freedumb for you to do just what they tell you You missed that train of thought You refuse to be taught a lesson Now this is what I'm guessing You'll be held accountable The things you didn't want to know You're stressin' Now with your mind they keep messin' They took your so-called rights, you didn't even fight While you were busy fuckin' sleepin' You know your government was creepin' Somebody left the door unlocked while you were asleep Your life was bought & sold, yes, to the highest bidder Left you in sitcom hell So convinced you're doing well You sit back synapses are attacked American gladiators are the only thing they're given' back You're dying & in your mind, while they keep lying, They took your so-called rights You didn't even fight Now that we've given you this message you've got a mess But you can salvage, continue to grow & soon you'll know that little things in life can make a differ ence You don't got to be some politician Take back those given rights Stand up & join the fight
