Pale was the wounded knight, that bore the rowan shield Loud and cruel were the raven's cries that feasted on the field Saying "Beck water cold and clear will never clean your wound There's none but the witch of the Westmoreland can make thee hale and sound"

So turn, turn your stallion's head 'til his red mane flies in t he wind

And the rider of the moon goes by and the bright star falls beh ind

And clear was the paley moon when his shadow passed him by below the hills were the brightest stars when he heard the owle t cry

Saying "Why do you ride this way, and wherefore came you here?" "I seek the Witch of the Westmorland that dwells by the winding mere"

And it's weary by the Ullswater and the misty brake fern way Til throught the cleft in the Kirkstane Pass the winding water lay

He said "Lie down, by brindled hound and rest ye, my good grey hawk

And thee, my steed may graze thy fill for I must dismount and w alk,

But come when you hear my horn and answer swift the call For I fear ere the sun will rise this morn ye will serve me bes t of all"

And it's down to the water's brim he's born the rowan shield And the goldenrod he has cast in to see what the lake might yield

And wet she rose from the lake, and fast and fleet went she One half the form of a maiden fair with a jet black mare's body

And loud, long and shrill he blew til his steed was by his side High overhead the grey hawk flew and swiftly did he ride Saying "Course well, my brindled hound, and fetch me the jet bl ack mare

Stoop and strike, my good grey hawk, and bring me the maiden fa ir"

She said "Pray, sheathe thy silvery sword. Lay down thy rown shield

For I see by the briny blood that flows you've been wounded in the field"

And she stood in a gown of the velvet blue, bound round withh a silver chain

And she's kissed his pale lips once and twice and three times round again

And she's bound his wounds with the goldenrod, full fast in her arms he lay

And he has risen hale and sound with the sun high in the day She said "Ride with your brindled hound at heel, and your good grey hawk in hand

There's none can harm the knight who's lain with the Witch of the Westmorland."