The other day while I was driving home my world was shaken It occurred to me that I had left too many risks untaken I'm always sitting here just waiting for a revelation Is it ever gonna come?

All this searching yet my destiny is still unfound Makes me realize this world will always let me down So it seems that the only hope I ever had Was everything that You are

I'm falling down
Tumbling after You
I'm overwhelmed
Tripping over simple truth
In all I've found
There's nothing that's more beautiful
Than what I've found in You

You could always see right through the front I'd offer You Not believing my excuses, waiting for the truth When You could have turned Your back And walked away from me You, You picked me up instead

So we'll turn another page and change the way I look at You And maybe I'll begin to understand what You went through Not content to leave me wandering and unaware You took my hand instead Yeah, You lead me to the edge

You're everything that I ever needed
Now I wanna believe this time
That You would love me
That You would say I'm Yours, I'm Yours, I'm Yours