When we start the revolution, all they probably do is snitch When we start the revolution, all they probably do is snitch When WE start this revolution, all they, probably do is SNITCH! [Boots] I used to work at Mickey D's And to my old buster-ass manager, licky DEEZ

Had me workin on hands and knees, scrubbin grease

And in the summer with the oven on, it's hundred—ten degrees

I would despise flippin fries, I guess his bitch—ass

thought he was the shit, with his little red and gold tie

I asked him why I couldn't get mo' hours

He said it must be cause I lacked the mental powers

If I was smart then I would be in his position

I left his nose in a busted up condition

Only came back for my last check to pay me off

He told me then, that he wasn't gonna lay me off

Said I should quit and it would be to my enjoyment

I fell for it and couldn't get my unemployment

To ALL the managers, on ALL the shifts

When we start this revolution, all y'all probably do is snitch!

Chorus

[Boots]

Now hella my folks got respect for you, killa

Wit a raised black fist, and a pocket full of scrilla

Cap peelers want your autograph, say you know the path

But I do the math, my game bursts, like a bubble in the bath

Punk asses like you is just here for confusion

Be abusin rhetoric, and it's slightly amusin

You be cruisin all the networks, Ebony and Jet works

'long witcha efforts, now what's yo' net worth?

If you ain't talkin bout endin exploitation

Then you just another Sambo in syndication

Always sayin words that's gon' bring about elation

Never doin shit, that's gon' bring us vindication

And while we gettin strangled by the slave-wage grippers

You want to do the same, and say we should put you in business?

So you'll be next to the rulin class, lyin in a ditch
