The Cure

Whisper your name in an empty room You brush past my skin As soft as fur Taking hold

I taste your scent Distant noises Other voices Pounding in my broken head

Commit the sin
Commit yourself
And all the other voices said
Change your mind
You're always wrong

Come around at Christmas I really have to see you Smile at me slyly Another festive compromise

But I live with desertion And eight million people Distant noises Other voices

Pulsing in my swinging arms
Caress the sound
So many dead
And all the other voices said

Change your mind You're always wrong
