

This Is Life

The Dangerous Summer

There's a change in the wild
Subtle waves pushing time
And I see the days turn to night
I'm taking in all my peripheral thoughts
It's a feeling
It's a pulse inside my lungs
I see sky where once was ceiling
Believe in the fact I could change the world

Cause I think I could
It used to come my way
I used to feel like I could not open up
But now I am free

It's a shame, this is life
With everything at our disposal but we sit inside
Most our lives
Hoping to God for a better one after we die
I used to hold that chain
I used to carry the weight
Of all my problems here with me
But now I'm coming through

But now, now I'm coming through

It's the wake before the rise
The promise of what we all want
If we pull from inside, close your eyes
The movement is taking me closer, it keeps me alive
I used to run away
I used to hide from these walls that gave me life
But now I can be

Do you remember me like I remember you?
Do you remember me like I remember you?
Do you remember me like I remember you?
Do you remember me like I remember you?
