

Impossible Boy

The Hoosiers

The teller told an unusual tale
With spider words and webs
To capture all the ears they fell upon
The story of an impossible boy
Who never even knew that he
He was real

He cast a spell of implausible joy
Armed with only charm
Born of benevolence, he waved a wand
Upon a world so consumed with the boy
That never even knew that he
He was real

The teller told an unusual tale
With spider words and webs
To capture all the ears they fell upon
The story of an impossible boy
Who never even knew that he
He was real