

Great Moments In Redneck History #2

The Lacs

Hello everybody and good evening. This is great moments in redneck history. One sad morning in 1931 Elma Lou Anderson was trying to make a dish to take to her friend Verna Williams house because of the passing of her husband Cletus. But she had a problem because it was the depression meat was scarce but she had plenty of vegetables from her garden. Her husband Bobby Ray Ray came in from hunting with only one rabbit which wasn't nearly enough to feed a family of seven. So she thought and thought and then it hit her. She washed and cut up all her vegetables she skinned the rabbit and threw it all in a big cast iron pot. She cooked it until it thickened then laid the top with homemade cat head biscuits. It was a big hit and the Williams family ate off of it for three nights in a row. Even the dog Bo got to eat scrapings off of the floor. We would like to thank Mrs. Elma Lou Anderson and that rabbit for the world's first casserole. And this has been another great moment in redneck history.
